

Chicoreus Exuberans (Cossignani, 2004) # 123.6 mm F+++
Giant!

This Murex is not very common now, lives at a depth of about 35-45 meters, they can get from this depth only fishing trawl, so it is rarely of good quality, the species itself is open only in 2004, the exact and specific habitats are not known! In some literature, malacologists point to the habitat area of Taiwan, other facts say that some small colonies of this Murex live in some areas of South Vietnam, put up for sale shell, collected about 5 years ago, however, is in fairly good condition, and will be a rare and unusual exhibit of any collection, especially for fans of the Murex

50 $, Dec 2018

